Equine Health Studies

Airway Disease in Racehorses More Prevalent Than Previously Thought, Study Reveals

Racehorses need their breath to run their best. But inflammatory airway disease (IAD) can rob them of their stamina.

New research in the Ontario Veterinary College at the University of Guelph shows the disease is much more common than previously thought.

Horse Welfare Study Uses On Farm Assessments

Thanks to a team of University of Guelph researchers, headed by Cordelie DuBois and Katrina Merkies, we are one step closer to having a welfare assessment tool tailored for horses in Canada.

The on-farm welfare assessment tool aims to evaluate whether the National Farm Animal Care Council's (NFACC) Code of Practice standards are being met on equine farms in Canada, while helping farm managers learn about the current standards.
